

Relationships, Sex and Health Education (RSHE) POLICY

Relationships, Sex and Health Education Policy

Statement of Intent

Our mission is to promote a love of learning in order to maximise the life chances of every child in our Trust. Through nurturing, high expectations and skilled teaching, we will have a lasting and positive impact on our local and wider community.

Our Vision

The TEACH Trust supports our children to become empowered citizens that make a meaningful contribution to society. Our curriculum reflects our locality and all it offers and aims to educate all children in matters which affect humanity in the wider world: these include all matters that relate to the climate and the world around us, such as climate change; the importance of respecting and celebrating the importance of equality and diversity; and being responsible global citizens.

We have the highest aspirations for our children: the broad and balanced curriculum promotes learning, provides cultural capital and supports spiritual, moral, social and cultural development. The Rights Respecting Gold awards and Anti Bullying awards reflect some of many ways in which education for character are integral to the work of our schools and highlights our focus on the children's personal development.

We aim to inspire our children to be socially conscious individuals who make a difference to the world. All our children secure the key learning and skills they will need to become lifelong learners and gain employment. Our ultimate aim is to improve all our children's life chances and prepare them to thrive in their future lives.

Under the Equality Act 2010 and the Public Sector Equality Act which came into force in April 2011, the Trust has due regard to the need to eliminate discrimination, advance equality of opportunity and foster good relations.

The aims of relationships education in the TEACH Trust are to:

- Provide a framework in which sensitive discussions can take place
- Prepare children for puberty, and give them an understanding of sexual development and the importance of health and hygiene
- Help children develop feelings of self-respect, confidence and empathy
- Create a positive culture around issues of sexuality and relationships
- Teach children the correct vocabulary to describe themselves and their bodies
- Make a significant contribution to the development of the personal skills needed by children if they are to establish and maintain relationships
- Develop children's understanding of the different protected characteristics and the importance of equality and diversity
- Enable children and young people to make responsible and informed decisions about their health and well-being.

Curriculum

In TEACH Trust schools, relationships education is taught within the personal, social, health and economic (PSHE) education curriculum, following the Jigsaw PSHE programme. Key aspects of relationships education are delivered through the 'Relationships' and 'Changing Me' units of study (puzzle pieces) taught in the summer term. Biological aspects of relationships education are taught within the science curriculum, and other aspects are included in religious education (RE).

Relationships education focuses on teaching the fundamental building blocks and characteristics of positive relationships including:

- Families and people who care for me
- Caring friendships
- Respectful relationships
- Online relationships
- Being safe

See appendix 1 for further content.

Within the Jigsaw programme, there are specific learning intentions for each year group in the 'Changing Me' Puzzle. These specific lessons sit within the whole Puzzle (6 lessons) which looks at change, and coping with change, in lots of contexts, so changes as we grow up and enter puberty are seen as one sort of change that we can all cope with. See appendix 2 for further content.

Working with Parents

The TEACH Trust liaises with parents regarding:

- when relationships education lessons will occur in school
- the context of the relationships education programme
- their right to withdraw their children from sex education content taught outside what is specified in the National Curriculum Science objectives
- the process by which they can withdraw their children
- how questions of a sensitive nature are dealt with.

Statutory Requirements

The Relationships Education, RSE, and Health Education (England) Regulations 2019 have made Relationships Education compulsory in all primary schools.

As a primary academy we must provide relationships education to all children as per Section 34 of the Children and Social work act 2017.

However, we are not required to provide sex education but we do need to teach the elements of sex education contained in the science curriculum, which states that children should be taught to:

- describe the changes as humans develop to old age
- describe the life process of reproduction in some plants and animals

In teaching relationships education, we must have regard to guidance issued by the Secretary of State as outlined in Section 403 of the Education Act 1996. Furthermore, all state-funded schools must have 'due regard' to the Secretary of State's guidance on RSE (DfE, 2000) which states that:

- 'All children, including those who develop earlier than average, need to know about puberty before they experience the onset of physical changes' (1.13)
- Children should learn 'how a baby is conceived and born' before they leave primary school (1.16)

Non-Statutory Guidance

The following non-statutory guidance documents have been considered in the creation of this policy:

- Sexual violence and sexual harassment between children in schools and colleges (DfE 2018)
- Sharing nudes and semi-nudes: advice for education settings working with children and young people (DfDCMS 2020)
- Behaviour and discipline in schools (DfE 2020)

Children withdrawn from lessons

It is important to note that the Relationships Education at our Trust sits within the Trust values framework and that we consider it vital to do this work in partnership with parents and carers. Parents do not have the right to withdraw their children from Relationships Education. We are mindful that parents do have the legal right to withdraw their children from the components of sex education within the PSHE (Jigsaw) Programme, whilst we hope they do not feel the need to do so, as one without the other can be problematic.

Parents wishing to withdraw their children from lessons should write a letter to the class teacher, informing them of their wishes. The class teacher must pass those names onto the PSHE co-ordinators and the Head of School. The Head of School may contact the parent(s) to discuss their decision prior to the lessons being taught. Children withdrawn from the programme of study will be given alternative work to do, in another class, for the duration of the programme.

Confidentiality and Child Protection

It is recognised that, on occasion, Relationships Education may raise concerns over specific issues relating to the children's lives. These may include child protection and confidentiality issues. On such occasions, the school will follow the appropriate procedures relating to confidentiality and child protection, as per the Child Protection and Safeguarding Policy. All child protection concerns will be referred to the school's Designated Safeguarding Lead (DSL).

Roles and Responsibilities

The role of the class teacher

The child's class teacher will deliver all relationships education lessons, within the PSHE (Jigsaw) programme. The role of the class teacher is to provide engaging lessons in a safe and comfortable environment. Teachers provide experiences that will have maximum impact on learning through developing confidence, encouraging an active role and developing good, respectful relationships. The class teacher should encourage sharing ideas as part of a group, and listening and respecting the views of others. All adults in school are responsible for informing teachers about any concerns about the personal and social development of individual children. However, if a child makes reference to anything which gives cause for concern (e.g. sexual abuse, illegal substance use) then clearly such matters cannot remain confidential. Staff will report such incidents to the Designated Safeguarding Lead who will contact social care for further advice if deemed appropriate.

The role of school leaders

The school leaders are committed to a whole school approach to RSHE that recognises the importance of children receiving consistent messages about key aspects of health and wellbeing. The school leaders place a high value on the role of relationships education.

The role of the subject leaders

The responsibilities of subject leaders are as follows:

- to prepare a policy and scheme of work, evaluating and reviewing as necessary
- to co-ordinate and lead the implementation of the policy throughout the school
- to monitor, evaluate and review the teaching of relationships education throughout the school
- to scrutinise lesson plans and children's work
- to ensure curriculum coverage by maintaining an overview of PSHE across the school
- to keep up to date with developments and use appropriately
- to support teachers in the delivery of Relationships Education
- to provide training when necessary
- to liaise with colleagues in school and outside agencies as appropriate, in order to further develop the opportunities for pupil engagement.

The role of Trustees

The role of Trustees is to ensure the provision of relationships education is in line with the vision and values of the Trust and that it fulfils statutory government guidance.

Appendix One: DfE 2020 Statutory Guidance

Through the Jigsaw PSHE programme, TEACH Trust schools teach the aspects of relationship education as per DfE 2020 statutory guidance.

Families and people who care for me

By the end of primary school, children should know

- that families are important for children growing up because they can give love, security and stability
- the characteristics of healthy family life, commitment to each other, including in times of difficulty, protection and care for children and other family members, the importance of spending time together and sharing each other's lives
- that others' families, either in school or in the wider world, sometimes look different from their family, but that they should respect those differences and know that other children's families are also characterised by love and care
- that stable, caring relationships, which may be of different types, are at the heart of happy families, and are important for children's security as they grow up
- that marriage represents a formal and legally recognised commitment of two people to each other which is intended to be lifelong
- how to recognise if family relationships are making them feel unhappy or unsafe, and how to seek help or advice from others if needed.

Caring friendships

By the end of primary school, children should know

- how important friendships are in making us feel happy and secure, and how people choose and make friends
- the characteristics of friendships, including mutual respect, truthfulness, trustworthiness, loyalty, kindness, generosity, trust, sharing interests and experiences and support with problems and difficulties
- that healthy friendships are positive and welcoming towards others, and do not make others feel lonely or excluded

- that most friendships have ups and downs, and that these can often be worked through so that the friendship is repaired or even strengthened, and that resorting to violence is never right
- how to recognise who to trust and who not to trust, how to judge when a friendship is making them feel unhappy or uncomfortable, managing conflict, how to manage these situations and how to seek help or advice from others, if needed.

Respectful relationships

By the end of primary school, children should know

- the importance of respecting others, even when they are very different from them (for example, physically, in character, personality or backgrounds), or make different choices or have different preferences or beliefs
- practical steps they can take in a range of different contexts to improve or support respectful relationships
- the conventions of courtesy and manners
- the importance of self-respect and how this links to their own happiness
- that in school and in wider society they can expect to be treated with respect by others, and that in turn they should show due respect to others, including those in positions of authority
- about different types of bullying (including cyberbullying), the impact of bullying, responsibilities of bystanders (primarily reporting bullying to an adult) and how to get help
- what a stereotype is, and how stereotypes can be unfair, negative or destructive
- the importance of permission-seeking and giving in relationships with friends, peers and adults.

Online relationships

By the end of primary school, children should know

- that people sometimes behave differently online, including by pretending to be someone they are not
- that the same principles apply to online relationships as to face-to-face relationships, including the importance of respect for others online including when we are anonymous
- the rules and principles for keeping safe online, how to recognise risks, harmful content and contact, and how to report them
- how to critically consider their online friendships and sources of information including awareness of the risks associated with people they have never met

- how information and data is shared and used online.

Being safe

By the end of primary school, children should know

- what sorts of boundaries are appropriate in friendships with peers and others (including in a digital context)
- about the concept of privacy and the implications of it for both children and adults; including that it is not always right to keep secrets if they relate to being safe
- that each person's body belongs to them, and the differences between appropriate and inappropriate or unsafe physical, and other, contact
- how to respond safely and appropriately to adults they may encounter (in all contexts, including online) whom they do not know
- how to recognise and report feelings of being unsafe or feeling bad about any adult
- how to ask for advice or help for themselves or others, and to keep trying until they are heard,
- how to report concerns or abuse, and the vocabulary and confidence needed to do so
- where to get advice, for example family, school or other sources.

Appendix Two: Jigsaw PSHE Content

The grid below shows specific learning intentions for each year group in the ‘Changing Me’ Puzzle within the Jigsaw PSHE programme. These specific lessons sit within the whole Puzzle (6 lessons) which looks at change and coping with change in lots of contexts, so changes as we grow up and enter puberty are seen as one sort of change that we can all cope with.

Year Group	Piece Number and Name	Learning Intentions ‘Children will be able to...’
1	Piece 4 Boys’ and Girls’ Bodies	identify the parts of the body that make boys different to girls and can use the correct names for these: penis, testicles, vagina, vulva, anus respect my body and understand which parts are private
2	Piece 4 Boys’ and Girls’ Bodies	recognise the physical differences between boys and girls, use the correct names for parts of the body (penis, anus, testicles, vagina, vulva) and appreciate that some parts of my body are private tell you what I like/don’t like about being a boy/girl
